

INFORMATION SHEET ON FINANCIAL BENEFITS

As a preliminary point, it should be noted that - in the context of this information sheet - the term distribution is used in its economic sense. From the perspective of the Federal Act on Financial Services of June 15, 2018 (FinSA), this term includes an offer, advertisement and/or financial service relating to the purchase and/or sale of collective investment schemes.

Within the framework of (i) its financial product distribution activities, (ii) carrying out asset management mandates in connection with Robo-Advisory accounts and (iii) the services it provides to issuers of digital assets such as tokens or other cryptographic assets that are issued and/or transferable on a distributed ledger or blockchain, Swissquote Bank Ltd ("Swissquote") shall receive and retain distribution fees or other retrocessions from certain promoters or issuers (together the "Financial Benefits").

DISTRIBUTION FEES

Issuers of financial products such as investment funds conclude distribution agreements with other financial intermediaries ("distributors") such as Swissquote: in return for their distribution activities, distributors receive part of the income received by the issuers. Within the area of investment funds, the distribution fees (also known as "trailer fees") paid to the distributor by the fund management companies are generally calculated on the basis of the management fee received by the fund management company as set out in the fund contract. A percentage of this management fee is thus periodically paid to the distributor on the basis of the volumes invested in the financial product concerned through the distributor. On an issuance of digital assets (e.g. an initial coin offering (ICO)) where Swissquote provides services to the issuer, Swissquote receives a percentage of the contributions paid by clients participating in the issuance.

Swissquote retains the distribution fees it receives as remuneration for its financial product or digital assets distribution activities. Such activities include, notably, maintaining a website containing information on the financial products and/or digital assets which enables clients to make informed investment decisions. In addition, not refunding the distribution fees and other retrocessions received enables Swissquote to offer its clients commission charges which are recognised as being particularly attractive.

OTHER RETROCESSIONS

Swissquote also enables promoters of financial products to make their products known through various sponsoring and marketing activities which benefit clients (for example, special free trade or flat fee offers). Within this context, Swissquote receives retrocessions where the amounts involved depend on the number of transactions carried out by its clients. The amounts received by Swissquote from financial product promoters in this way generally serve only to offset the amounts Swissquote should have received from its clients on a commission basis for the transactions carried out.

DETAILS OF DISTRIBUTION FEES RECEIVED BY SWISSQUOTE

In the case of investment funds (not including Exchange Traded Funds, see separate section), Swissquote generally receives around 40% of the management fee charged by the issuer on the total assets invested in the funds concerned by Swissquote clients.

The management fee varies depending on the type of investment fund, the investment fund itself and the unit class involved. It can easily be found in the fund contract or in other documents such as the fund prospectus or Key Investor Information Document for the fund in question.

Taken on the basis of a sample of the investment funds available to subscribe via Swissquote, for different types of investment fund, below is an average of the management fees charged by issuers. This information is specified purely for information purpose and does not represent official information.

Average management fees charged

09.2023

Bond funds	Equity funds	Money market funds	Asset allocation funds / alternative funds	Real estate funds
0.89%	1.28%	0.23%	1.17%	1.01%

While Swissquote generally receives around 40% of the management fee charged by the issuer and while the management fees charged are often very close to the average figures shown here, there are – of course – exceptions. In light of this, below you will find details of the maximum distribution fees (save for rare exceptions) Swissquote may receive from investment fund issuers:

Maximum distribution fees Swissquote may receive

09.2023

Bond funds	Equity funds	Money market funds	Asset allocation funds / alternative funds	Real estate funds
1.54%	1.66%	0.48%	1.45%	0.77%

In the case of Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs), when Swissquote receives distribution fees (which is generally not the case), these fees are generally around 15% of the management fee charged by the issuer of the ETF.

In connection with the carrying out of an asset management mandate, the amount of the distribution fees and other retrocessions received by Swissquote does not in principle exceed 0.5% of the assets managed.

The services provided by Swissquote on issuances of digital assets may vary considerably and are remunerated in a manner that may differ significantly depending on the cases, but fees are generally charged at between 5% and 10% of the contributions paid by clients participating in the issuance.

In the case of structured products, the Financial Benefits that may be paid to Swissquote include – on the one hand – compensation paid on a one-off basis (“Initial Fees”), and – on the other hand – compensation paid on a periodic basis (“Ongoing Fees”). Initial fees can amount to up to 50% of the issuer’s subscription fees, while Ongoing Fees – generally calculated and paid on an annual basis – can amount to up to 50% of the manager’s management fees.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Financial Benefits may give rise to certain conflicts of interest, notably with regard to asset management. Swissquote has put special measures in place in order to safeguard the interests of its clients.

WAIVER OF RESTITUTION RIGHTS BY CLIENT

As a client of Swissquote, you have been provided with all the information needed to assess the amount of distribution fees Swissquote may have received in the past or may receive in the future within the framework of its distribution activities for financial products and digital assets and within the context of execution of asset management mandates. In accordance with Article 19 of our General Terms and Conditions, you waive your right to restitution of Financial Benefits which Swissquote may have received in the past and may receive in the future.
